

Dr. Robert Nachtrieb is Lead Scientist at Lutron Electronics. Rob represents the United States at meetings of the IEC Subcommittee TC34 (Lighting), and has played leading roles in the development of international standards for LED dimming and fluorescent dimming. Rob is active in the NEMA Lighting System Division, where he is Chairman of the Lighting Controls Section. Rob received his doctorate in applied plasma physics from MIT in 2000 and his MBA from MIT in 2012.